Septuagesima Sunday

“The joys of Christmastide seem to have fled far from us. The forty days of gladness brought us by the birth of Emmanuel are gone. The atmosphere of the holy Church has grown overcast, and we are warned that the gloom is still to thicken. Have we, then, forever lost Him whom we were so anxiously and longingly sighed after during the four slow weeks of our Advent? Has our divine Sun of Justice, that rose so brightly in Bethlehem, now stopped His course, and left our guilty earth?

“Not so. The Son of God, the Child of Mary, has not left us. The Word was made Flesh in order that He might dwell among us. A glory far greater than that of His birth, when angels sang their hymns, awaits Him, and we are to share it with Him. Only, He must win this new and greater glory by strange, countless sufferings; He must purchase it by a most cruel and ignominious death: and we, if we would have our share in the triumph of His Resurrection, must follow Him in the Way of the Cross, all wet with tears and the Blood He shed for us.

“The grave maternal voice of the Church will soon be heard, inviting us to the Lenten penance; but she wishes us to prepare for this ‘laborious baptism,’ by employing these three weeks in considering the deep wounds caused in our souls by sin. True the beauty and loveliness of the little Child born to us in Bethlehem, are great beyond measure; but our souls are so needy that they require other lessons than those He gave us of humility and simplicity.”
